INTRODUCTION

A teacher leader is more than just a teacher. They are leaders to students in the classroom as well as teachers in the school and in the community. Teachers should use relational leadership to meet goals and improve instruction (Donaldson, 2007). Teachers can build relationships with other teachers by earning trust and respect by showing their success and being honest, but not judgmental. It is necessary for teacher leaders to build strong relationships to be influential in the school.

Conclusion

I agree with the importance of building relationships and using those relationships to improve school culture and instruction (Donaldson, 2007).

I am passionate about education and would love to share my passion by becoming a leader.
